New York, March 17.—A refusal of bituminous coal operators in the central competitive field to confer with the United Mine Workers on a new wage agreement, announced at Washington today by Secretary of Labor Davis, "will inevitably force suspension of the bituminous mining industry on April 1." President John L. Lewis, of the international organization, declared here tonight.

"Mr. Davis' statement places the responsibility for any suspension or strike which may occur squarely upon the shoulders of the operators," said Mr. Lewis.

"The operators' refusal to meet with us constitutes a complete repudiation of the terms of their contract with us.

"It certainly is not an honorable course for them to pursue. If the operators maintain this attitude, organized labor in the bituminous industry will be forced to suspend operations when their present contract expires."

Coming on the heels of the anthracite operators' virtual refusal today to grant any of the nineteen wage demands submitted by labor leaders here, the outlook in the bituminous field is "most disappointing." Frank W. Givens, official representative of bituminous organizations at the New York conference, said tonight.

"We have felt all along that our efforts to confer with the operators would be useless," he said. "We can now say that we did our best to settle our wage question amicably and failed."

Magnificently built-a perfect physical speciman, Mr. Perryman stood his ground, and when the combatants were separated by Sheriff John Watkins and others, he said: What I said before the jury still stands. Mrs. McNiece was not in court when the verdict was read. At her home twenty minutes later she appeared on the porch to receive newspaper men. She was preparing to leave Tailbotton for Atlanta to visit Hall Hentz, her uncle, and her husband's sisters, Miss McNiece, who was injured in the A., B. & A. wreek last Sunday. Mrs. McNiece also was slightly injured, she being a member of the party en route to the trial.

Coart was up this morning at 6:30 o'clock. A newspaper man passed the jail an hour later and he called at him from his window to come to see him. He-said that he had a good night's sleep and was ready for the verdict, which, he hoped, would set him free.

During the conversation a rat ran across the cell floor. Coart stopped the rodent's journey with a quick movement of the foot. The rat bit a small nick in Coart's shoe before it was finally put to death.

He resumed his conversation and it finally drifted to the trial.

"You know." he said, "this case reminds me of Sir Gilbert Parker's hook, The Right of Way." Charlie Steele was quite a character and I never will forget the scene where the lumberjack, Baptists, came to thank him for acquitting him on the charge of murder.

lumberjack, Baptists, came to thank him for acquitting him on the charge of murder.

"Steele looked at the lumberjack and said:

"Get out of here, you are as guilty as hell."

The newspaper man looked at him, and Coart immediately retorted: "Of course, in that connection such does not apply to my case."

Locally, it cannot be said the verdict is a popular one. The defendant has many friends here that are still loyal to him. It is understood that the jury stood eight for conviction and four for acquittal when they were put to bd last night. The verdict was reached this morning on the twelfth ballot.

Both the defendant and Mrs. McNiece made statements in the trial. Mrs. McNiece underwent a grilling. The entire case hinged upon these statements, which were bitterly attacked by counsel for both sides.

Mrs. McNiece's statement of the alleged attack upon her by Coart and his undesired courtship, is believed to be responsible for the verdict of guilty.

The relationship grew until, according to the state, Coart desired to take Mrs. McNiece away from her husband. Mrs. McNiece repelled his advances, and after telling him that only death could separate her from her husband, he shot McNiece, it was contended.

ATLANTA, GA. Feb. 22rd 1922

Advertising Department. Atlanta Constitution. Gentlemen:

I have been interested in reading what some of your advertisers have had to say about the results obtained through your columns. Perhaps my experience would interest you.

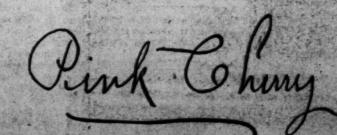

For most of the past 35 years I have been in business in this city. I have tried advertising in devious waysbrass bands-parades-wagons drawn by fancily dressed horsessandwich boys-and the good Lord only knows how many other ways.

And then I have tried all the newspapers of Atlanta -individually and collectively. And out of it all I have come to one definite conclusion-there's nothing so good as newspaper advertising-and no newspaper so good as the Constitution.

Result: For the past three years I placed practically all my grocery advertising in The Constitution. I consider your paper the ONE REAL MEDIUM for high-class meats, groceries, fish, fruit and vegetable advertising. In introducing a new commodity I also know The Constitution to have greaf "pulling power."

Put me down as a groceryman who believes in and who appreciates the fine results to be obtained through the Constitution's advertising columns.

Yours truly.

PERENNIAL OBJECTORS. Senators Reed and Borah, one a democrat in party alignment, the other a republican, are almost in a class by themselves as being the two dependable perennial objectors to practically every measure, regardless of its origin or impor tance, that comes up for action by the senate.

If Senator Reed ever sponsored know it: we have no knowledge of any measure that is known as the "Reed bill." His senatorial recordis that of a senator who may be relied upon only to oppose anything that any other senator pro poses; and if by any combination of circumstances he should happen to introduce a bill the chances are that he would find himself lined up with its opponents before it could be brought to a vote.

Borah is of much the same stripe of senator in this respect. He is natural-born "anti," and, it

It may be that resort to the dark age practice of physical torture by flogging "might work wonders" in preventing crime in this state; but at best it would be a doubtful experiment.

What Georgia-and the whole country, for that matter-needs is not more brutal and inhumane methods of punishing convicted criminals, but law-enforcement a measure in the senate we do not methods by which capture, conviction and punishment would be more certain.

Certainty of punishment, not its severity, is the great deterrent element in crime prevention.

To install whipping posts in our penal institutions would mean the lowering of Georgia in the scale of civilization.

Surely, Judge Shurley could not have expected the mere sugges tion of such a thing to be taken seriously by the good people of this enlightened state.

In dealing with crime and the criminal element, Georgia needs no "buggy traces," no whipping -a senate resolution instructing the posts, but a plentiful supply of sure-fire justice!

ANOTHER VIEW.

The advertiser who constantly boosts his own business in a standard home newspaper is also a com munity helper in a big way, for he incidentally advertises the business spirit and enterprise of his town and section. And another view of the bene fits of advertising is well expressed in the following, from The Athens (Ga.) Daily News, when it says that "it helps to establish credits"-

"Many men believe in advertis ing, for they know it pays. Their feeling, therefore, is that when a merchant who is a good advertise applies for a loan, a reasonable amount of goods, bought by him on credit, is likely to be turned over quickly and promptly paid for, on account of his method in keeping his goods constantly before the public. The banker would have onfidence that the goods would be disposed of and turned into cash before they got out of date and

"The merchant who advertises eldom has any shop worn goods. And in that way advertising helps the merchant's credit not only, with the banks, but with his customers And one is just as important as

The point as to the business dependability of the steady advertiser is well taken. There is no doubt that it gains confidence for him and tends to give him creditable standing with the banking in-stitutions of his community.

It requires about 15 minutes to do the exercisea included in the symphony, and some three minutes dore to do the two added movements which I shall describe in due course. I consider this medicine cheap at the price of 20 minutes a day—it is one of very few medicines I take on my own judgment. Should any of my readers care for these exercises, just write and ask for the symphony and enclose stamped, addressed envelope. Most people would much rather read about taking exercise than take the exercise. That is why I am telling about it here—I want to please as many readers as I can. To tell the truth, I'd rather read about it or something else than take exercise myself. I hate to take any medicine yet I will take any medicine a good doctor tells me I need, even if it be some kind of medicine I have condemned. I think too much ef my bealth to call in a doctor and then fall to follow his isntructions to the letter—but I know I think more of health than a great many do. Some of my readers write to ask me whether they should take this or that medicine their own doctors have prescrebed, or whether they should undergo this or that treatment their own doctors have advised. So I know some people have a very small regard for health. The most contemptuous

O SECURE SHOALS Raising In State

Detroit, Mich., March 17 .- Decla ing that "if it's the last thing I do n this world, I'll exert every resource in this world, I'll exert every resource and influence at my command to keep the hands of Wall street off Muscle Shoals," Henry Ford today broke his silence maintained during the last two months with regard to his offer to lesse and operate the government waterpower project in Alabama.

Mr. Ford made the statement to The Detroit News in response to an intimation reaching him to the effect that because of his silence, the people of southern states had begun to wonder whether he had lost interest in the project.

There are a few oldtimers left after all. At a variety theater the other all. At a wanter throw sand to the stage from a cone and do a jig step. It got more applause than a shimmy shaker who came shortly afterward. Yet the big thrill is denied the present crop of vaudeville devotees. There is no cartain rising on a tropical forest, a chirp of birds during a short stage wait and then kerplunk from a tree drops the Human Frog in green spangled tights. "Still and all" I heard a young chorus girl with vivid smudges of red on her cheeks say in front of the Claridge, "the Johns don't take money from us girls like they used too. Believe me, dearie, the world is getting refiner and refiner every day."

uard the country's waterpower an evelop it." Freedom For Industry.

"In Muscle Shoals lies the freedom of American industry," Mr. Ford continued. "During the war the country turned its every resource to help free the world from militarism—a militarism fostered by an international money power. Now, in the same way, we are going to fight to the last ditch to free American industry and American agriculture from that same money power. If the American peopue once can catch the idea of what water power means—how it can be put to service in a thousand ways, cutting the cost of industrial power to a minimum and thus, through better service, make possible a higher standard of living for all people at a greatly reduced cost—they never again will

'All the people need to catch the idea is an example. A potential example lies at Muscle Shoals. In a sense, the destiny of the American people for centuries to come lies there on the Tennessee river, beause whoever controls a nation's power controls that nation's people.

"America's power today is dependent on the steam power of coal. The great private linanciers own the bulk of the country's coal mines. These financiers, centered in Wall street, have a strangle hold on the industry and transportation of the country.

To Stop Tribute, "If Muscle Shoals is deevloped along neelfish lines it will work so splen-idly and so simply that in no time undreds of other waterpower develophundreds of other waterpower develop-ments will spring up all over the country and the days of American in-dustry paying tribute for its power would be gone forever. Every human being in the country would reap the benefit. I am consecrated to the principle of freeing American indus-try. All I want is a chance at Muscle Shoals and, if its the last thing I do on this earth, I'll fight for that chance."

on this earth, I'll fight for that chance."

In speaking of the fight being waged against him on the Muscle Shoals project, Mr. Ford said:

"Work should be going on at the shoals all this spring and summer because if the thing isn't settled so work can be done when the river is low, a great part of the project of completing dam No. 2 and building dam No. 3 must be put over until 1923. It would be tragic to hold off employment of so many thousands of men for another year when the need of work is so general and so great."

New indictments were asked by Solicitor Boykin because of a technicality that might have affected the original indictment under which Barrien is held. Berrien discounted school warrants for about two years. The latter part of last year, school superintendents in sixteen counties complained to M. I. Underwood expressed similar views. "I can see no reason why a aingle American soldier should remain on the Rhine," he said. "The American government is entitled to receive from Germany its proportionate share of the reparations funds."

The Prudential committee of the university trustees today agreed to erect a small building on the campus near Denmark hall at a spot just to the east of the building now used by the college Y. M. C. A., which will be used as a road laboratory by the department of engineering.

Under the direction of Professor Strahn much very effective soil testing has been done for different counties during the past several years, and splendid results have been attained. This work has been of great value to the road building development of the state.

Additional equipment for this laboratory is to be installed and the work carried on on a large scale. SLIGHT DROP SEEN

IN COST OF LIVING Washington, March 17.—Retail food costs for the average family in the United States during February were 0.3 per cent less than they were during January, according to the compilations made by the United States department of labor today. This decrease, combined with others that have occurred since February 15, 1921, made the total reductions for a year average 11 per cent.

Of thirty-seven articles of food entering into the average diet reductions ranged from 28 per cent during the year on granulated sugar down to 2 per cent on canned peas. Increases were found to have been made in the prices of seven other articles included in the general diet amounting to as much as 179 per cent for onions and 1 per cent for fresh eggs.

Dog Muzzle Law Asked of Council By Health Board

Action Is Taken Following Suggestion Made by State Health Body.

Responding to a suggestion made by the state board of health, the city board of health Friday afternoon adopted a recommendation urging city council to pass an ordinance requiring all dogs to be muzzled, unless the owners keep them indoors or penned on the premises. The measure vill be introduced in council Monday

If caught on the streets without a muzzle the dog is to be taken to the city pound, where it will be kept three days and then put to death unless claimed by the owner, in which event a case will be made against the owner for permitting the animal to run at large without a muzzle.

Would Provide Loans for Liquidation of Debts Not Incurred for Agricultural

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON, Constitution Bureau Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, March 17 .- (By Cor Charles H. Brand, of the eighth dis trict of Georgia, a member of the banking and currency committee, introduced in the house today a bill to amend the federal farm loan act so that actual farmers may borrow money to discharge indebtedness tiue by them whether the same was incurred for agricultural purposes or not. This bill was referred to Judge Brand's committee for consideration.

Section 12, paragraph 4, of the federal farm loan act defines the purposes for which loans may be made to farmers and subdivision (D) deals with loans to liquidate indebtedness of borrowers. Under the present law, as set forth in this section, loans to liquidate indebtedness can only be made to discharge a mortgage upon the premises or to liquidate indebtedness of the owner of the land mortgaged, incurred for agricultural purposes.

COST OF MANUFACTURE

OF GAS IS DECREASING

During the hearing Friday on a rule nisi issued by the Georgia railroad commission requiring the Columbus Gas company to show cause why its present gas rate of $1.75 should not be reduced, R. M. Harding, manager of the company, admitted upon crossexamination that the costs of manufacturing gas in Columbus were much less in 1921 than in 1920 and have continued to decrease during the first two months of 1922.

Attorneys Frank U. Garrard, of Columbus, and J. Prince Webster, of Atlanta, representing the company, claimed a fair value of $600,000 on the gas works and a minimum value of $501,000, based on the inventory made for the railroad commission eight years ago by Professor Riggs and brought down to date by the commission's ruling in the Atlanta gas case.

City Attorney H. C. McCutcheon, who appeared for the minicipality, contended that the valuation figures were excessive and should be only $100,000 or $150,000. He declared the company had increased the salaries of its officers during the past twelve months, while mill hands were taking a cut in wages from $30 to $15 per week, and practically all other salaries had been reduced.

"Many other business houses in Columbus are not making 1 per cent on their investment, and I do not see why the commission should guarantee this company an 8 per cent return,"

Mr. McCutcheon declared.

He asked that the rate be cut to $1.35.

the hope of killing quail and other game.

When the negro taxi driver stopped the car at a negro house on the road, where they hoped to get some information with reference to the whereabouts of the deserted house, the shooting began, he said. He does not know which one of the men did the shooting, but that he was shot in the leg, the negro asserted. He emphatically denied doing any shooting of even having a gun.

Derrington admits that both he and McAllister had guns. He says the shooting was caused by an argument over taxi fare. Thrasher denied this, Derrington now admits that he shot his own self in the left leg but claims that one of the negroes inflicted the wound in his shoulder. He is reported to be in a serious condition tonight.

87th Birthday Marked By Tea

A beautiful event of Friday afteroon, marking the 87th birthday of one of Atlanta's most prominent citizens, was the elaborate tea given by Mrs. Katherine Hillyer Connerat in elebration of Judge George Hillyer's birthday and complimenting both Judge and Mrs. Hillyer.

Mrs. Connerat was assisted in re-eiving by her mother, Mrs. J. L. D.

Mrs. Connerat was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. J. L. D. Hillyer.

The pretty home was artistically decorated with white roses and green St. Patrick carnations. The receiving line in the living room had for background potted palms.

A short musical program was an interesting feature. Four talented children. Miss Marion Wolff, grand-daughter of Judge and Mrs. Hillyer, played two piano numbers; Miss Jaquelin Moore, granddaughter of a very close friend of Judge Hillyer, played a group of numbers on the Italian harp—dressed in a costume like that worn by young ladies when Mrs. Hillyer was herself a child, and George Hillyer Connerat, the little cousin and namesake of Judge Hillyer, and his brother Vincent Connerat, played an arrangement of a Beethoven minuet, written for flue and violin.

Augusta Still Without Street Car Service

Augusta, Ga., March 17.—(Special)—There is no change in the street car situation. The cars are still in the barn, and so far as known no steps are being taken to start them moving again.

It had been expected that Mayor Julian Smith would call a meeting of city council tonight, but he has declined to do so. He stated that he has not been requested to call the meeting, except by a few citizens who have not approved the course of council in the controversy between the city and the street railway company. Any two members of council can, acting in concert, order a meeting of council. However, no two members of that body have expressed desire to the mayor that a special session be held.

held.

Mayor Smith reviewed the quarrel between the city and the street railroad and makes the statement that the city has done what it has deemed best to protect the interests of the greatest number of the people.

Meantime the Jitneys are rendering what service they can to control the situation. Both the city and the street car company seem to be settling down to a long-drawn-out fight. The merchants, especially those on Broad street, are continuing their demands that something be done, no matter that something be done, no matter who is right and who is wrong, to the end that the street cars be placed in operation again.

TO RETURN POLL TAX TO WOMEN

Savannah, Ga., March 17.—(Special.)—Tax Collector George Pate has announced that he will pay back to more than a thousand Chatham county women who paid their poll tax for 1921 last fall the dollars they deposited then, or will give them receipts for poll tax for 1922.

This action follows the ruling of the attorney-general, obtained by the Women's Voters' league here, that women were not liable for 1921 poll tax.

Lyerly, Ga., March 17.—(Special.)
Unless there is another cold snap on the road Chattooga county will this year have one of the finest crops of fruit in many years. Peachtrees are now in full blossom, and other fruit rees will be blossoming out within a few days.

Fruit on the mountains is practically a certainty, as it takes a very heavy freeze to kill the young fruit on the hills, where there is a continuous breeze. The fruit in the valleys, however, is easily killed, and a light frost will badly injure the crop in the valleys.

To Be Happy Though Human. I think unmarried women are par-ticularly prone to this kind of idealization. They have missed marriage and motherhood, the crown and fulthey can not possibly be happy. Also, it is bad manners to seem embarrassed about it. We'll "know better next time," but this time we're not going to be so silly as to emphasize our "break" by the too evident consciousness which only serves dent consciousness which only serve to attract attention to the blunder.

Well cared for hair will not need oughly aired. When the weather perquent sun baths.

A healthy scalp should be shampooed once in three weeks unless you live in the city. Then, if the hair seems to be quite dirty, shampoo it more frequently and use oil on the scalp before the shampoo so you will not dry up the scalp. An egg shampoo is the best for general use.

Beat up an egg and rub it, yoke and white together, thoroughly into the scalp and over the hair. Let it dry in, it will take about half an hour. Then wish with very warm water and soap, using castile or tar soap preferably. Use soap twice or three times if the hair is very oily, then rinse with hot water, then with cooler water, finally with cold water. If you can attach a hose and spray to the bathroom faucet the shampooing will be easier and the rinsing quicker and more thorough. Dry the hair in the sun when possible.

Romance has a way of showing up in places where it is least expected. Who, for instance, would expect to find it jestling etcows on a street car? No matter how rich the crosstown car is in its opportunity for the study of human nature, the selfish instinct that crowds in the best seat, courtly manners and, more frequently, the lack of them, the love story and court ing are generally omitted from its liss of attractions. Perhaps if it were not for the habit of humans to give themselves up, in a street car, to dazed abstraction, there would be more stories unfolded in the ride to work and more persons on conductor 22's run who would have sensed the secret he shared with Caroline Tripp. Caroline took the car early every evening and rode the three miles almost to the end of the line. Later each evening she boarded it and rode home. It was not long before she was bowing to conductor 22 and, in time, she learned his name was William Rose. She took to sitting next to the platform and they talked of the weather, the problems of the conductoring business, and of each other. For Caroline it was adventure and William would not have shifted his run for the pick of the system.

The limitations of a street car acquaintance are many. There were too many people, William thought, to allow a man to speak up to a girl like he wished and there were crossings to be flagged, old ladies to be helped on and off, and money to be taken in. In the brief exchanges, whenever opportunity permitted, the two grew to know each other through formalities and small talk and each did a deal of wondering.

"A conductor," William told the motorman in a burst of confidence, "has gotta be careful. There are a lot of folks what talk to him pleasant as pic, but let him hint he'd like to call around on his night off, and they'd ring the bell for a stop. Now, I ain't talking about anybody in particular, or anything, but all the same it is true."

"You're right," agreed the motorman, "I knew a fellow once who fished a dinky box of candy out of his lunch bo made a mistake, we should like you to reassure us."

"Certainly," Jeanne replied, sinking into the chair which the secretary drew forward. She still wore her street frock, her hat and furs and her gloved hands played nervously with the chain of her mesh bag.

She knew that her hour of reckoning had come, but she was determined to face it with head high and a smile on her lips. Even in that futile moment she wanted to be true to the proud ancestry which she had voluntarily manufactured for herself.

She was devoutly thankful that she was to be spared the humiliation of her husband's presence at this expose. To have had Vic, with his splendid ideas of honesty and fair play, listen to her denunciation, would have been more than she could have gone through, and preserved the stoicis which she had vowed to maintain.

She knew now what it was to care what someone else thought; once she had not believed that anything mattered except her own happiness. Now she realized that she would rather die than have Yic suffer as he would suffer when he learned that the women he loved was only a sham and a pretense; a girl who had bartered her principles for the little glittering trivial things which she thought spelled life.

"First," began Mrs. Barstowe, in a coldly concise voice, "would you mind telling us why you, my son's wife, should have visited Senior Bonnicetti alone in his apartment this afternoon?"

The thrust was so unexpected that it took Jeanne a minute or two to rally.

rally.

How on earth could they know where she had been that afternoon?

She looked at them steadily as they sat in a row before her, grimly accusing.

Her mother and father-in-law had been out of town.

Nor Jeffries either! For she had

Nor Jeffries either! For she had not made the appointment with Bonnicetti over the telephone at home. Then her eyes went slowly to Vera Dayton and what she saw there brought her quickly to her feet. The furious blood mounting to her cheeks, Vera Dayton was the traitor! It was Vera who had found out about her appointment. It was Vera who had stole that ambiguous letter from Dick Canby! It was Vera who had been in her room when she had hidden the empty case that had once contained her jewels.

Could it be possible that this well-bred girl, driven to diabolic cunning by her jealousy, was capable of such infamy?

"I do not think that I need answer are unwarranted or subject to que tionable interpretation. My visit Signor Bonnicetti was purely a bus Signor Bonnicetti was purely a business one and was imperative in as much as he is ill and confined to his apartments as you quite well know."

"You realize of course," her mother-in-law continued, "that your visit was—well, not quite good taste after the unfortunate incident that occurred at my dinner party when the idea was conveyed to all of my guests that the necklace you wore had been given you by Signor Bonnicetti. Do you think such information could be pleasing or flattering to my son?"

Jeanne's head went up and her eyes flashed fire.

"And do you realize?" she demanded, "that the person who brought this accusation against me is with us now—Miss Dayton? She seems to know so much about my life; suppose you question her instead of me."

The door was flung violently open.

"Yes, and she has told a damn sight more than she knows!" cried Victor REINFORCEMENT.

At sight of Jeffries, the secretary, Jenne's heart sank.

His presence could mean but one thing: her theft of her own jewels had been discovered. Perhaps he had even told about the letter which she had taken from her husband's mail.

"Why—this is really a surprise," she stammered. "We thought, Vic and I—that you were golfing at Hot Springs. It is nice to have you back.

There was no answering smile on her mother-in-law's cold patrician face. Barstowe, Sr., coughed uneasily and kept wiping his glasses nervously with his handkerchief. A cruel little self-satisfied smile hovered around Vera Dayton's thin lips. The secretary's face was as unscrutable Happened.

Richard Brabant, a successful young lawyer, has given a year's leave of absence to his wife,

Sally, hoping that she will learn something of life during that time. She begins by meeting

Keith Gilbert, always fabelled "dangerous," and through him associating with New York's gayest crowd of celebrities of the artistic world, among them Lee Craig, a pretty artist; Guy Seldun, a playwright, and Graham Browne, a financier, Gilbert makes no secret of his love for her, nor does

Patricia Loring, a modren flapper, make any secret of her fondness for him. Sally goes to a dance club with Barbara Lane, who is an old-fashioned wife, and her husband and their guest.

Neal Calhoun, and there sees Gilbert with Patricia. Calhoun intimates that Gilbert is not a man whom Sally should know. Sally learns that her husband, who has gone west, has taken his pretty secretary with him, and is so piqued by the knowledge that she neepts Gilbert's invitation to a house-party at The Eyric, his country place. The evening of her arrival she sees mysterious lights on the river and sees signals from the house. A strange man appears to arrest Gilbert for bootlegging, but he escapes to a launch on the river, taking. Sally with him. Barbara and Andy quarrel shout Sally. And does not come home for dinner, and Barbara discovers that he is dining at a neighbor's. On the launch on which Gilbert and Sally escape, Gilberts forces his attentions on her, and when she acreams for help, Neal Calboun comes to her rescue. Gilbert thinks Sally has betrayed him and swears vergeance. Calboun takes her to Barbara Lane's home in the country for the night.

"William," she said, "why do you think I've been riding on your old now, and we'll toddle back."

William's perplexity added to his diffidence as the days went on. Once he hinted that Thursday, was his night off, but he could not decide whether the girl looked interested or indifferent. When he turned in at the barns that night there was a notice on the board telling 22 to take the next day off and relieve 36 who would be absent on Thursday. "It is lucky," he thought, "I didn't make a date. Maybe it's a hunch that my dope is all wrong."

On the evening of this day off

Maybe it's a hunch that my dope is all wrong."

On the evening of chis day off William, held by his usual thoughts, walked to the corner where the girl boarded the car. He glanced at his watch, hastened, but was a half block from the stop when Caroline stepped on the car and was borne away.

"Another hunch," muttered William as he stepped to the curb and watched the car move on. A block up the street it stopped and someone got off. William, watching idly, thought he recognized the figure under the arc and, protesting that he was a fool for thinking every girl looked like Caroline, walked on. They met. halfway.

"I had an unexpected day off," William explained clumsily, "and came down to help you on the car." The girl was as embarrassed as he.

"I missed it," she said, turning her head. William looked at her long, forgot his ominous hunches, and plunged into the solution of his problem.

The Shelter of Respectability. Sally did not bother to find out what explanations Neal Calhoun had given the Lanes for her appearance at their home in a tattered evening gown in the middle of the night.

He had gone when she came down-stairs the next day, and Barbara, try-ing not to look curious, gave her a note that had been left for her.

"Be sure to go to your mother-in-law's today," he had written her.
"You needn't stay long, but don't fail to go. And don't worry—you won't be bothered by last night's events again."

Yet she felt some too secure, as she dressed in the things that Barbara lent her. She was rather shocked at her own appearance, when she had finished. The simple blue serge frock, with its stiff white collar and cuffs, seemed like a uniform; it was too harsh looking for her, and discounted many of her claims to beauty. Her hair looked drab and colorless, her skin seemed gray, and there were deep circles under her eyes. She felt cold, bedraggled, much in need of the services of a masseuse.

Barbara lent her a coat, too; slipping her arms into its worn sleeves. Sally had a sudden revelation of what Babs' life was like, and the way in which it differed from hers. How must it seem, she asked herself, to wear clothes like this, and work so hard—Barbara seemed to be in three places at once, this morning—dusting the living room, finding for Andy the particular tie he wanted, arranging things for supper that night, and somehow remaining calm and unruffled through it aff.

"Babs, you're a wonder," she exclaimed. How on earth do you do it all?"

"Tan not a wonder at all—Em just claimed. "How on earth do you do it all?"

"I'm not a wonder at all—I'm just an old-fashioned wife," Barbara retorted, adjusting the shades at the dining room windows and snatching up the newspapers that Andy had dropped in a straggling heap all about his chair. "You could do it too—any woman can, if it's her job. Now—oh, there's the car."

Madame Brabant was frankly curious about Sally's costume, and as frankly disapproving.

"My dear child, are you going in for the simple life?" she demanded, examining Sally through her lorgnette. "And why be so dowdy about it? You look like a perfect frump!"

Barbara flushed painfully, and Sally rushed to the rescue.

"I look like a frump because I'm not pretty enough to wear clothes like this; you and I need gowns that are kind to our fairings," she exclaimed, quickly, slipping her arm through Barbara's. "It takes a raving beauty like Babs to wear ready-made gowns and look lovely in them. Never again will I try to compete with her on her own ground!"

Madame Brabast promptly made the situation more uncomfortable he to riend by the band and drew her into the conservatory, "Don't you mind her; the adores making me uncomfortable," the whis-pered, as they bent above the sunken pool where glimmering soldfish darted through the submerged plants. "I wish I were pretty enough to wear the things you have, instead of always asked her softly. "Because, I-oh, because I don't

"Because, I—ob, because I don't want to!" Sally sprung up off the low seat and turned toward the living room again, this morning she feared Barbara's searching eyes. "Anyway, Dick might not want me—have you thought of that?"

Her mother-in-law was standing in the wide door that led to the conservatory, with a man whom Sally had not seen before. There was nothing remarkable about him; he looked like most of the men whom Madame Brabant knew—well dressed, rather important looking, not particularly interesting. Sally hardly gave him a thought, yet unconsciously she expected him to show at least a glimmer of interest when they were introduced. Men always did; her beauty never failed to interest them.

But this one—a Mr. Clifford—paid her the tribute of perfunctory polireness and nothing more. Obviously, he was not interested in the small, shabbily gowned girl who was Madame Brabant's son's wife. He turned away from her to Barbara, who seemed to hold his attention. And Sally, humiliated, took refuge in the library with her own thoughts.

It was clothes, then, that made her, she told herself bitterly. Poorly dressed, she wasn't worth noticing.

It was clothes, then, that made her, she told herself bitterly. Poorly dressed, she wasn't worth noticing.

But what was it that made Barbara different? Dick has always insisted that Barbara was interesting intelligent, charming. Apparently is Mr. Clifford agreed with him. And she, Sally Brabant, accustomed to homage, was of no account.

Sally Brabant, accustomed to homage, was of no account.

"Well, I will be!" she told herself, disgustedly. "There may not be anything to me now but looks, when I'm well dressed—but there will be, by the time Dick comes back!"

The thought that perhaps Dick would not come back she thrust resolutely from her mind.

$10,000 DAMAGE SUIT FILED BY MRS. BRYSON

Suit for $10,000 damages for alleged personal injuries sustained, she says, when the steps to her home gave way and precipitated her to the ground, was filed in Fulton superior court Friday by Mrs. Ella Bryson against J. W. Goldsmith, owner of the property.

The petitioner alleges that the steps were not safe, and she had already notified the renting agency to this effect. Mrs. Bryson further alleges that the defendant was negligent by reason of the fact that he did not exercise ordinary care in regard to the dangerous conditions of the steps. The alleged accident occurred January 19, 1922, at 636 DeKalb avenue.

She claims that she was hadly injured, and has been unable to do her housework since that time. She is represented by Attorney Hayns M. Matheson.

COMMITTEE WILL FIX DATE IN APRIL FOR FORD MEETING

At a meeting of the Ford-for-Muscle-Shoals committee held at city hall Friday afternoon, it was planned that representatives should go to Macon next Sunday to arrange a date for the state-wide mass meeting in that city tate-wide mass meeting in that city for the indorsement of Ford's offer for the Muscle Shoals plants. C. W. McClure, chairman of the committee, and others, will go.

It was said that April 7 would probably be suggested as the date of the meeting.

M'COY WILL LECTURE ON MUSCLE SHOALS

Simultaneously with the appearance of the advertisement appearing in Friday's newspapers announcing the illustrated lecture to be delivered this evening at the Auditorium by T. H. McCoy, A. B., A. M., B. D., on the Muscle Shoais project, came the news that Henry Ford intended to "exert every influence and resource in his command to keep the hands of Wall street off Muscle Shoals."

The lecture Saturday evening, which will commence at 8 o'clock, will be interspersed with pictures of unfinitied Wilson dam. Mr. McCoy stated that he had secured special permission from the war department to exhibit the airplane, motion picture, and stereopticon views of Nitrate Plant No. 2, totaling about 134 views.

DENTAL FRATERNITY CHAPTER HOUSE URGED

That a chapter house at the Southerm Dental College of Atlanta is a vital need, was the sentiment expressed by speakers at the Hotel Ansley Thursday night at a meeting of version at the Piedmont hotel attended.

I. Dr. B. D. Brooker, of St. Louis.

to a frock of the sort that is made in hundreds. Taking the place of these metallic girdles, there are immense hip ornaments that hold the fullness of the skirt at the left side, or sometimes at the back. Some of the evening dresses show elaborate harness of metal, or pearl, or crystal, that holds the bodice over the shoulders, falls over the waistline at the back, and manages to catch up the draped fullness across the hips. Such harness as this, if brilliant enough, would be sufficient to bring an all-black dress into favor.

To be sure, some of the French dressmakers showed some all-black frocks in their collections this season. But they were few and far between, and doubtless the intention of the dressmakers in doing this was to display a new drapery or a new sleeve, or a new skirt treatment with the element of color to detract from the novelty. Black was used, as it has been used, as the medium in which the designer could best work out a new idea. It was clay in the hands of the potter.

But most of the dressmakers realize that the all-black dress, even used as the medium for a new idea, no longer had appeal. If they are black they must use it with bright color.

Wear a Black Frock if You Must, But Liven it With Color or Bright Metal.

What some writer has called "cheerful black" is the only black permitted in society at the present time. Black may be used, but it must be used with color or with enough metallic or pearl embellishment to give it brilliance. Splashes of jewelry can turn the trick. Colored chinon is used as under facings that relieve the som-fashioned coral.

Any woman who wishes to show her own individuality and would like to blaze a trail in a new fashion, might search through her jewel case for bits of this old-fashioned red coral to wear with an all-black frock. Or, with a black frock trimmed with jet, for this frock of Doeulilet has rtimming of jet.

for this frock of Doeuliet has rim-ming of jet.

If you are so fortunate as to have a really large coral ornament of the sort that were used as "breast pins" in years gone by, or earrings of this same rich red tone, you have the wherewithal to add the smartest touch to your all-black costume,

Fruit Desserts. Make fruit dessert-and then make more of them. They are delicious and they are wholesome and they may be quite inexpensive. Even plain baked apples or apple sauce are good desserts, and to give them a little touch of festivity you may add a candied cherry or a dab of whipped died cherry or a dab of whipped cream to the baked apple or a few shredded almonds to the apple sauce. Here are some other good things:

Orange Float.

Add to a quart of boiling water a cup of sugar and the juice and pulp of two lemons. Thicken with four tablespoons of cornstarch rubbed smooth with a little cold water and cooked, while stirring, for fifteen minutes. Fill a serving-dish with aliced oranges, sprinkle with sugar and wine, pour over the lemon custard, cool and serve.

pour over the lemon custard, cool and serve.

Apples a la Windsor.

Boil rice until soft in milk, sweetening and flavoring to taste, and arrange on a serving-dish. Cover with small peeled and cored apples cooked in lemon syrup, sprinkle with powdered sugar, and fill the apple cores with marmalade, jelly or jam. Moisten the rice with a little of the syrup and garnish with bits of candied fruit.

Lemon Scouffle.

One cup of sugar, one tablespoon of butter, two tablespoons of flour, the juice and grated rind of one lemon, one cup of milk, two eggs. Cream the butter, sugar and flour together. Add the juice and rind of the lemon, then the beaten yolks and the milk. Bake in a pudding dish placed in a larger pan half full of boiling water. This is a most convenient pudding to make in a hurry, as it does not need a sauce. The top is a deficious scouffle and the bottom a creamy sauce.

Prune Whip.

of this shepherd schoolmaster, was caraless of whether his target stood still or ran; he did not lift his eyes from the reloading of his gun to see, and in these few preclous moments blackenzie rushed down on him, opening fire with not more than twenty have been been the saddle-horn. The horse squatted, frembling, snorted its alarm, trampled in panic, lifting a cloud of dust. And into this rising dust Mackenzie sent his lead, not seeing where it struck, quickly emptying one revolver, quickly shifting weapons from hand to hand, no year cursed his frightened horse, both hands busy with the beast. Mackenzie pushed on, firing at every step. The loorse partly turned, head toward him, nartly baring the scoundrel who was that moment finging his leg over the saddle to seek a coward's safety. It was a black mare, a splute star in the took and, and hands have been been and took away his gruns, leaving his approach of the interior of the house Mackenzie where it is the both hands busy to the saddle to seek a coward's safety. It was a black mare, a splute star in the wall beside the stove and went beared took away his gruns, leaving his approach of the interior of the house Mackenzie under over with admirable coolness and took away his gruns, leaving his horse to place himself on the slows ahead of his-neury's encircling novement, keeping under cover with admirable coolness herewing up his hand in command to litall, challenging him as plainly as words to turn his efforts from a defenseless man to one who stood ready to give hattle. Hall then source to place himself of the sort of the property of the prop nt was to face Mackenzie, who had run up and posted himself directly in ais way.

Reid's dead horse lay not more than twenty feet behind Mackenzie. Hector Hall leaned glowering at him through the dust perhaps twice that distance ahead. A moment Hall leaned in that way, then came spurring on, holding his fire as if his purpose were to ride Mackenzie down in contempt. Mackenzie fired, steady against the onrushing charge as a rock in the desert wind. When Hall returned the fire he was so close that the flame of his weapon struck hot against Mackenzie's face. Mackenzie leaped aside to avoid the horse, emptying his pistol into Hall's body as he passed. A little way on Hall wheeled the horse and came riding back, but the blindness of death was in his face, his rapid shots fell wild among the shrubs at Mackenzie's side. Hall's hat fell off as his head sank forward. So for a little way he rode, then slipped from the saddle, one foot entangied in the stirrup. The horse stopped suddenly. Mackenzie ran down the hill to disengage Hall's foot. But his merciful haste was useless; Hall was beyond the torture of dragging at a stirrup. Mackenzie released the foot, composed the dusty body, drew the reins over the horse's head and left it standing beside its dead master.

eft it standing beside its dead master.

Hall's companion in the raid was still struggling under his fallen horse, and from the vigor of his attempts to free himself Mackenzie gathered that he was not much hurt. A moment's work set the scoundrel on his feet, whole enough to ride on many a rascally foray again. Mackenzie said nothing to him, only indicated by a movement of his hand what he was to do. Limping painfully, the fellow went to Hall's horse, lifted his friend's body across the empty saddle, mounted behind it with a struggle, and rode in humiliation from the field, glad enough to be allowed to go. Reid was standing beside his dead horse, watching the fellow riding away. So for a little he stood, as if he debated some movement against the man who had sought his life with away. So for a little he stood, as if he debated some movement against the man who had sought his life with such hot cruelty but a few moments past, not turning to see whether Mackenzie came or went. Presently he took his coat from the saddle, slung it over his shoulder, looked after the retreating man ngain, as if debating whether to follow: Mackenzie came up, Reid's pistol in his hand. This he offered, apology in his manner, but no words on his lips. Reid took it, silent and unmoved, shoved it into his scabbard, walked away. He continued on to the top of the hill. There he stood looking this way and that a little while, as a man looks who is undecided of his road. Then he passed on. When Mackenzie reached the spot where Reid had stood, he was no longer in sight.

CHAPTER XI.

A Night Summons.

Somebody was calling on the hill hehind the sheep-wagon. Mackenzie sat up, a chill in his bones, for he had fallen asleep on watch beside the ashes of his supper fire. It was Dad Frazer, and the hour was past the turn of midnight. Dad came riding down the hill.

"What's the matter?" Mackenzie inquired, hurrying out to meet him.

"I don't know," said Dad, panting from excitement. "Mary came over on her horse a little while ago and rousted me out. She said somebody just passed her camp, and one of 'em was Joan."

"Joan? What would she-what at his belt.

Somebody was approaching, riding rapidly up the valley. There was more than one horse. Reid took up the lantern, stood a moment as if indecisive, placed it on the stove. Not satisfied with the way the light of it struck him there, apparently, he removed it and stood it in a corner. Whoever was coming, Reid did not want it known at a glance that his scabbard was empty.

The woman sat down, her eyes distended in fright. Swan pulled a chair to the table and sat down.

"Where's your woman?"

"Where's the money?" Reid countered, putting out his hand. "You threw me down after I delivered you three hundred sheep—you didn't come across with a cent—on the plea that one thief couldn't collect from another. All right, Swan; we'll forget the sheep deal, but this is another matter. Put your money in my hand; then we'll talk."

"Is she in there?" Swan pointed the coor behind Reid, half rising from his chair.

the door behind Reid, half rising from his chair.
Reid put his hand to his empty holster, his body turned from Carlson to conceal his want of a weapon. Carlson jerked his head in high disdain, resumed his chair.
Mackenzie stepped back from the window, leveling his pistol at Reid's head. Joan was the subject of this infamous barter. A moment Mackenzie's finger stiffened to send a bullet into Reid's brain, for he considered Reid's brain, for he consider warrant of death. But Reid was unarmed, and there was something in his attitude that seemed to disclose that arned, and there was something in his attitude that seemed to disclose that it was a b.uff. Mackenzie let down the weapon. It was not the moment for interference; he would allow the evidence to accumulate.

"Come across with the money before we go any further." said Reid, firm in his manner. "I've got to get out of this country before morning."

"I wouldn't give you five hundred dollars for her. I've rought my woman." Swan stretched out his hand to call attention to where she cowered in her chair, "woman for woman, I say; that's enough for any man."

"That's not o: bargain, Carlson."

"My woman for yours, that's a fair trade," said Swan. "Open the door and bring her to me, and take my woman and go."

"Weather' dain," said Raid.

Reid drew away from him, seeming to contract upon himself against the door, and whether Swan read it Mackenzie could not tell, but he could see from the window the sickness of fear spread over Reid's pale face.

"You ain't got no gun on you." Swan mocked. "Hell! my old woman can lick you, and I'm goin' to make her do it. Then I'll take that feller's woman away from you and kick you to hell out of here!"

Swan turned to Hertha. who had left her chair on his first threatening move toward deid. Southland Filled With Recruits

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER. Many For Sale at Bargain Prices

New York, March 17.—In just a few days now the big league ball clubs will all be on the road for the roundabout journey home. The brave open acres of the south will be strewn with broised hopes of disappointed boys from the far spots of bineball, murmuring: "I didn't get a chance."

There should be no shortage of farin labor in Texas or Arkansas this season, for Branch Rickey alone, of the Cardinals, took about 40 men south with him to Orange. Texas, many of whom must be placed at rome kind of employment if he doesn't wast to tote them all the way to St. Louis at the club's expense. Other clubs training in the same belt have perfect examples to dispose of at reduced prices.

There are three shases of spring training. The first is the arduous golf and pinochle period through which the elders of the game must pass at Hot Springs or West Baden in order to get in trim for the training camp phase. This is the period just drawing to a close now. As a rule certain big stars such as Burleigh Grimes, of the Dodgers, spend the secondary term in hard training shouting "I don't hear you" over long distance phone arranging salary terms with their club owners. This is very good for the wind and it also lardens the muscles of the diaphragm. You could crack brass doorknobs on Burleigh's diaphragm now, it's so hard.

The City league will have six teams and the Spalding league will be an eight-club organization. These two leagues include the fastest of the amateur teams in the city and while the date of the opening of the season in each league has not been set, play will begin in both just as soon as wenther conditions permit.

Both these leagues will play for trophies donated by the A. G. Spalding and company.

There will be another meeting next Thursday night and it is thought that by this time Cliff Wheatley, who is in charge of the baseball section of the Clyic Receration union, will be able to meet with the managers of the clubs and get the season started right after this meeting.

SHINNERS LANDS BERTH WITH GIANTS

Antonio, Texas, March 17 .-Ralph Shinners, who came to the Giants from the Indianapolis club of the American association, will suc-ceed George Burns in center field, ob-servers here believe. Shinners has so far outclassed any other player for this post that it is regarded as almost certain that Mc-Graw will place him in the center garden this season. His friends say he has stood out head and shoulders over the rest.

Bill Cunningham, the other candidate for the place, probably will be carried as utility outfielder instead carried as utility outfielder instead of Casey Stengel.

Shinners played classy ball with Indianapolis last year and led the association in hitting. He has shown up well in batting practice and exhibition games here.

St. Patrick's day found the camp deserted of rookies—off to Houston for a little how-de-do with the minor leaguers there—and the regulars hard at work for another game with the White Sox.

The regulars were not without a little workout Friday. They engaged a team of soldiers from Camp Travis, just outside the city, for their morning exercise.

RED SOX LINE-UP FIRST TIME THIS YEAR

Boston, March 17.—The Red Sox of 1922, changed by off-season sale and trade, began to take playing form today with the first line up against the Pirates at Hot Springs, Ark. The team was to take the field as follows, only three men playing the positions they lield with the Red Sox last year:

J. Collins, center field; Pittenger, third base; Smith, rightfield; Pratt, second base; Harris, left field; Bruns, first base; O'Rourke, shortstop; Walters, catcher.

SPORT HAPPENINGS FROM EVERY CLIME

The set of signatures necessary to enable the Yankees to begin building their new ball park was affixed to the documents in the case St. Patrick's day by John F. Hylan, mayor of New York. The Yanks may now go ahead if they wish and build that leagues, who will play baseball this grandstand to seat 80,000 people.

Summer under the supervision of the Civic Recreation union, was completed that the park would be ready in 1923.

This is his fifth season in baseball.

Although the French municipal council has decided to appropriate only 1,000,000 francs for the 1924 Olympic games, Gustavus Kirby, chairman of the American Olympic committee, and officials of the A. A. U. believe the French Olympic committee will be label to have the appropriation raised to an adequate figure. The French government is entirely in sympathy with the plan to hold the games in Paris and might be expected to make the strong averages retired. "Ed" David has won out so far on the initial sack. If he can hit he will prove as good a first baseman as some of the old Oglethorpe players who held this position. With a few exceptions the Oglethorpe nine will be composed of new men. The outfield is a heavy hitting combination, starting with Bryan in the left section, Sims at right and Kemp at center, the Petrels can boast of a combination that is exceedingly dangerous. With these men working overtime the prospect of a heavy-hitting aggregation seems sure. The team is considerably faster than the usual run of college nines. rather strong representations to prevent a default of this chance. Kirby said, however, that the American committee would be glad to hold the games in Los Angeles if Paris should-fall down.

STEPHENSON PLAYS THIRD

Cleveland, March 17.—Riggs Stephenson, of Alabama, is being groomed at the Indians' training camp at Dallas as a successor to Larry Gardner, third baseman. Stephenson played a sensational game at second base the first of last season.

Stephenson is the former University of Alabama football and baseball star and college chum of Sewell. He led the league in hitting last year, fighting with Harry Heilman, of the Tigers, nip and tuck for several weeks.

The game was called at the end of the eighth inning on account of darkness, much to the relief of all parties concerned. A few more hectic minutes like those of the seventh and eighth innings would have put Ty. Cobb, "Red" Barron, Coach Clay, et al, into the advanced stages of nervous progretion.

pride in razzing the umps who called them behind the platter. Only at one stage of the game was the fire of artillery that had been loosed in his direction lifted. This was in the serenth inning when Cobb walked and stole second. Then the other one of the powers that be was practically annihilated by the onslaught of Coach Clay, "Red" Barron and a few of the more hotheaded of the players, who went out into the vicinity of second base with expressions on their faces that boded ill for his nibs.

In about three minutes Ty Cobb was like an island in a sen of white uniforms, and the crowd, as usual, got the entire proceeding all wrong. They thought that the argument was directed against Tyrus, who in a kidding way razzed the Tech shortstop, Jennings, for letting him get away with the steal. Jennings had nothing to say on the play, but there seemed to be a misunderstanding among the Tech players as to just what Ty meant.

When the inning was over Tyrus came over to the Tech bench and sat down with "Kid" Clay. What was said was neither here nor there, but the crowd was against Ty—and for the home-town boys—so it didn't make any difference. They craved blood and they preferred that the blood should be Ty's, which was a rather foolish proceeding.

Rental Figures.

Interesting figures on the additional cost required for decentralization were disclosed when it was shown that items of rentals for office space in some instances reached the sum of $150,000 annually, as is the case with the Boston district, Chicago being $186,000, according to an official statement given out by the bureau. Total rentals of the fourteen districts, not including the fourth district, located in Washington, which is government owned, amount to $1,004,884 annually.

The matter of increased personnel was another item of note mentioned. For instance, it was declared that the program necessitated several thousand more employees than were required to carry on the work in one central office. This, when considered with the information that the average basic salary of bureau employees is $1,400 annually, presents a heavy expenditure alone, Larsen brought out.

GA. SEASON OPENS TODAY

BY JEROME JONES, JR. Athens, Ga., March 17.—(Special) The Bulldogs will pry open one of the most ambitious schedules ever attempted by a southern institution of learning tomorrow when they meet the Fifth District Agricultural and Mechanical school team from Monroe on a setting up game. Claude Satterfield, for four years star outfielder and pitcher of the Red and Black, is the coach of the Aggies, and advance reports have it that he has corralled a well balanced and fighting team.

Coach Bill White, mentor of the Dogs, has sent his charges through the usual stiff practices during the past week, with a slight hold up reserving afternoon, and he expressed himself as being elated over the prospects for a consistent winning aggregation for the thirty-odd game schedule. The outfield, almost totally rebuilt, appears to have hitting strength, while the infield, the pitching staff: ule. The outfield, almost totally re-built, appears to have hitting strength, while the infield, the pitching staff and the coterie of catchers, including Rawson of the 1921 team, are round-ing into form.

Erskine Mayer Arrives at Bay BY COLONEL CLUKE

Charles Frank Much Better

New Orleans-Bay St. Louis, March 17.—(Special.)—They're about ready to start "bearin' down"—of course, meaning the 1922 Crackers. St. Patrick's day was celebrated by twenty-odd athletes with the greatest work-out of the week, and present indications are that "Bob" Spiller will have a full squad to go to the post dead fit when the Southern league gong sounds on April 12.

The pitching staff took on additional color today with the arrival of Erskine Mayer, a brother of the Cracker midfielder, and once of the Philadelphia Nationals' pitching staff. Erskine, an old-time Tech hurler, took to his new surroudings like a duck to water.

Second Baseman Ritter, who was delayed for a few days at home, also dropped in and went to work. Ritter, alongside of Roy Ellam, is expected to develop into a shifty keystoner, and with no one hereabouts to compete for his job it is believed the slender kid will have more confidence in himself.

The bill the Lyric.)
The bill the last half of the week at Keith's Lyric theater, which concludes its engagement with performances this afternoon and tonight, is one that is unusually interesting and entertaining. The headline attraction is offered by the popular Atlanta favorite, George Damerel and Myrtle Vall, assisted by Mirlam Allyn, in a musical satire replete with comedy, songs and dances.

dances.

"A Virginia Romance," presented by Robert Buchanan and company, four men and an attractive young lady, singing and playing the favorite songs and melodies of the south, with special scenic and costume settings.

McSnane and Hathaway offer a sprightly comedy, singing and talk-ing skit.
Other acts are Ethel Keller and Chums comedy, songs and musical selections, and Frear, Baggett and Frear in a novelty juggling turn.

Loew Vaudeville.

CAt the Grand.)

Four complete shows will be given today and tonight at Loew's Grand theater starting at 2:00, 4:00, 7:00 and 9:00 p. m. Five acts of high-class vaudeville and a long screen program featuring Edna Murphy and Johnny Walker in "Extra!"
One of the most enjoyable acts of the year is that of Joe Weston and Grace Eline, the headliners. It fairly bubbles over with laughing spots. Miss Eline is a very original comedienne, and has scored here in a most emphatic manner. Joe Weston is at his best as a tough bird of the underworld.

Other acts are "Dance Foilies." offered by six charming and graceful girls; Wahl and Francis in melodies from musical shows; Ubert Carlton, the blackface comedian, and Cowboy Williams and Daisy in western frolics.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY REVUE PLEASES LARGE AUDIENCE

It was as if Ireland, in all its at tractiveness—and minus its present turmoil—had been lifted from its pic-turesque position in the Atlantic ocean off the European coast and transplanted in the Auditorium here Friday night, when several hundred of Atlanta's most attractive girls and young women, attired in the costumes of "Old Erin," appeared in the St. Patrick's Revue under the auslices of Patrick's Revue under the austices of the Ladies' Altar society of the Sacred Heart church.

Fully 5,000 persons enjoyed the characteristic St. Patrick's day numbers of the ensemble, which consisted of Irish songs, Irish jigs, Irish folk dances and Irish holiday festivities.

From the opening chorus to the closing tableau there was not a single number that did not evoke veriferous applause.

May Closes at 17.95, With General Market Steady, at 4 Points Higher to 8

BANGE IN NEW YORK COTTON. Friday, March 17. Open High Low | Close | Cl

RANGE IN NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

Closed very steady.

New York, March 17.—Early declines were followed by advances in the cotton market owing to reiterated reports of improving British trade conditions and apprehensions of unsettled weather over the week-end in the south. May contracts sold up from 17.80 to 18.03 and closed at 17.95—ith the general market closing steady, net 4 points higher to 8 points lower.

The market opened steady at a decline of 6 points to an advance of 2 points and eased off right after the call. There were thirteen March notices issued, probably accounting for some of the near month selling, but these offerings were much lighter than they were earlier in the week and the market soon turned firmer on covering and trade buying. The latter included buying for Liverpool account and there were a good many private cables in the market here reporting a very decided improvement of business in cotton goods in Lancashire. It was said British manufacturers were receiving orders from both India and China and that in some instances idle looms in Manchester were starting up.

There were also reports from New Orleans that foreign spinners were seeking credits to aid them in buying cotton for forward shipment and the afternoon rally was promoted by bullish week-end figures. March sold up to 18.16 and July to 17.46, or 5 to 12 points net higher, with the close off a few points from the best under releasing. The weather in the eastern be, was better today, but the forecasts were for unsettled weather and local map, readers feared renewed showers or rains over Sunday.

It is reported that 5,000 bales of American cotton have arrived in Boston from Germany. The betief is that it is low-grade cotton of strong staple which can be sold to New England spinners but which was moving slowly in the German trade. Spinners, takings of American cotton for the week were 230,074 bales against 217,637 bales last year.

typical of the rest of the session, the net changes being a loss of 1 point to a gain of 5 points. May closed at 16.71.

The dry weather map caused considerable selling around the opening, which put prices 9 to 10 points under the close of yesterday, to 16.57 for May. Private reports of a large fire at Liverpool checked the downward movement and brought about small upturns, but real steadiness did not come until after the posting of the week-end figures, showing mill takings for the week of 194,000 bales against 179,000 this week tast year and 227,000 this week two years ago, an out-of-sight movement altogether larger than expected.

The large exports for the day helped to put the market to its best. Clearance from all ports amounted to 47,749 bales against 20,273 this day last year. For a while, in the late trading, there was more or less buying on prospects of wet weather in the belt again, but toward the close the demand appeared to have been filled up.

Boston wires announced that J. P. Morgan was in that city for the purpose of impressing on those interested in the affairs of hte New Haven railroad and New England as a whole, the importance of having 100 per cent deposits of the $27,000,000 4 per cent bonds maturing on April 1. Mr. Morgan pointed out that the new financing which offered an exchange of 7-per cent bonds and 10 per cent in cash for the maturing bonds was not a banking proposition as there was not a dollar to be made in commissions or underwriting. He said that all there was in it for anyone who held out his 4 per cent bonds was the doubtful distinction of bringing about a very chaotic condition. Unless this refunding is successful the chances are New Haven will go into the hands of receivers. But the chances are that Mr. Morgan and others hands of receivers. But the chances are that Mr. Morgan and others will be successful in getting holders of the maturing bonds to turn in their securities. A receivership for New Haven at this time would not be good for any of the many interests involved.

One large Broadway stock exchange house is advising its clients to watch the fertilizer shares. In this connection it is being pointed out that last year farmers everywhere were economizing in fertilizers, that recently the buying power of the farmer has been increased, that because of last year's saving in fertilizer more must now be spent to bring back the impoverished land, that the preferred shares of both Yirginia-Carolina Chemical and American Agricultural 1 Chemical are cumulative; that the common stocks of these and other fertilizer companies are selling out of line with the rest of the market.

Washington, March 17 .- Continued pessimism as to Germany's future with the German mark lower than at any the German mark lower than at any time since November of last year failed materially to check German industrial activity during February and the first part of March, according to reports to the department of commerce from Commercial Attache Harring, at Berlin, made public today.

"The feeling of insecurity and suspense noticeable in German industry during January has been heightened by the recent fall in exchange rates," the report said. "The German mark was lower on March 6 than at any time since November, the dollar being quoted at 261 marks. The attitude of labor continues most unsatisfactory and pessimism is increasing in regard to a further revision of the reparation question at Genoa. The Boulogne meetings combined with the mark collapse are the principal reasons for this pessimism.

Prices Increased.

"Maufacturers have not been covering foreign exchange requirements, but have delayed up to this time in the hope of more favorable political developments. Prices have increased greatly since October, and wages are also advancing. The shipping situation is still not clear. The extension of the recent railway strike was an occasion for concerted attacks by the opposition party on the Wirt government, which is apparently weaker despits the settlement of the strike."

While coal production in the Ruhr district during February was seriously affected by the railway strike, the pig iron and steel industries reported a "brisk month despite greatly increased transportation difficulties." Prices soared, and while no production figures in the iron and steel industry are

KARLOS AND BURKE TO BE REORGANIZED

Chicago, March 17.-Representatives of 1,000 creditors of Kardos & Rurke New York and Chicago stock-

Burke, New York and Chicago stockbrokers, voted today to support the company in plans for reorganization and resumption of business. The firm recently suspended.

John Burke, former treasurer of the United States, and one of the principals in the firm, attended the meeting with his counsel A. L. Rosa, of New York. A statement presented to the meeting indicated that the firm's liabilities aggregated $1,475,000, and assets $1,808,300, although of the latter only $200,000 was regarded as of the "quick" variety.

Spokesmen for the firm declared creditors would be paid 100 cents on the dollar. It was proposed to pay 10 per cent in cash and the remainder in notes to be paid within a period of three years in semi-annual install-

COTTON SEED

REPORT ISSUED

Washington, March 17.—The cotton seed and cotton seed products report for the seven months period, August 31 to February 28, issued today by the census burean shows:
Cotton seed crushed 2,625,520 tons, Compared with 3,063,649 for the same period the previous year, and on hand at mills February 28, 256,872 tons, compared with 424,557.
Crade oil produced 803,439,496 pounds, compared with 976,758,372, and on hand 69,952,001 pounds, compared with 727,760,580, and on hand 289,123,439 pounds, compared with 334,521,018.
Cake and meal produced 1,180,408 tones, compared with 1,347,013, and on hand 218,477 tones, compared with 22,342

Low Record for 10 Years

Washington, March 17.—Stocks of wheat in country mills and elevators March 1 were estimated at 72,564,000 bushels by the United States department of agriculture. This is the smallest quantity in the record of reports made to the department for that date during the last ten years, with the exception of March 1, 1918, when the abnormally low stocks of 66,000,000 bushels followed the small wheat crop of 1917.

Exports of wheat from the 1921 crop have been heavy and country mills and elevators possess only 9 per cent of that crop. This is the smallest percentage for these stocks in the same month in ten years, the highest record is 16 per cent.

Average wheat stocks in country mills and elevators March 1 during the last five years were about 91,000,000 bushels. Stocks this year were 20 per cent less than the five-year average. Wheat stocks of this class were as much as 155,000,000 bushels in 1916, or 112 per cent more than the 1922 figures.

News, Views and Reviews

Sincere—We favor buying side especially on breaks.

The pentitude of loanable funds is the impelling force back of the market. While the advances in many issues were impressive, we cannot help thinking that possibly pools will be tempted to use this present period of decided relaxation in money rates, already relatively low, to do some realizing.

Profit-taking seems to continue in the sugars, and yet we believe that the shares in that group have excellent supporting arguments and that speculative buying can be quite profitably done.

The coppers have been taken in hand several times, but have yet to show that they can sustain a rise for any length of time, and therefore the present advance will be watched with interest.

The action of Tide Water Oil in suspending dividends may have some effect upon shares of those companies which depend principally upon Mexico for revenue.

Rails are suffering from the Great Northern dividend incident, but the effect of this will soon wear away, we believe, particularly as March car loading statements are very encouraging.

a factor in connection with the upward swing of the market.

Confirmation of figures showing that total holdings of wheat in this country are materially below normal tended further to encourage general buying of wheat and to lift values, official announcement today of country mill and elevator stocks being substantially the same as private estimates which had recently been circulated. Higher quotations at Liverpool were likewise influential and in particular at the opening tended to send prices here upgrade.

Corn and oats reflected the action of wheat. In addition, receipts of corn were small and fair export buying of corn was said to have taken place at the seaboard.

Provisions were weak early with hog values, but commission house buying later more than offset the declines.

Are we not in need of a similar treatment?

We are in danger of an attack of nerves. Jazz, the bootlegger, crime waves and the disputes between capital and labor are dangerously near to getting on the nerves of all of us, if these things are not already on our nerves.

Headlines in the daily papers hurl these subjects at our heads. Staid trying to apply the cure, which seems crystal clear to us.

That cure is religious education. Not an education in forms and ceremonies, but one of applied Christianity.

Much is said today about the revolt of the young. Red revolt among the workers has wrought untold and useless agony in Russia. And whispers and rumors of incipient revolutions among the laboring classes is heard around the world.

Revolt Worth While.

But the real revolt may be seen in the fire beneath the smoke. This revolt has its roots in "the religious education," which began when Jesus was born of Mary in Bethlehem, nine-term centuries seen. It is the revolutions of the seen centuries are at the seen centuries are seen to the was born of Mary in Bethlehem, nine-teen centuries ago. of the mob.

Jim Drisdom was placed in jail late yesterday as the person suspected of pouring gasoline over a young white woman and then setting her afire, last Tuesday, because she refused his demand for money.

Will Drisdom, brother of Jim, arrested Thursday night, confessed, according to the authorities, that it was Jim Drisdom who attacked the woman and that Steve Snell, who has been mentioned as the assailant, was a myth.

myth.

The officers soon found Jim Drisdom. They say that he has a fresh scar on his face. The woman says she struck her assailant in the face with a butcher knife.

NOW SPEEDING WORK ON TARIFF MEASURE

Washington, March 17.—Chairman McCumber, of the senate finance com-mittee, said today it was the hope to have the permanent tariff bill ready for the senate within a week or ten days. In the hope of speeding un the work of rewriting the house measure, the committee majority adopted a resolution late today against the hearing of any further witness except senators themselves who might wish to present views on rates.

Aside from the question of valuation, three important matters remain before the committee republicans. They are whether there shall be an embargo upon the importation of dres, and the wool and sugar schedules. There were further hearings today on the dye embargo question on which the committee was represented as being very much divided. Four members were said to be opposed to an embargo and three in favor of it with "ee others loubtful.

The woolen schedule was to be taken up tomorrow, Senator Smoot, of Utah, the ranking republican, having been asked to prepare the schedule tonight. The committee already had agreed tentatively to the rate of 33 cents a pound scoured content requested by the republican-agricultural bloc, and it was thought that this rate finally would be approyed.

There is a division as to the sugar rate, Senator Smoot and others holding for a duty of 2 cents a pound on Cuban raw, with Senator Galder, republican, New York, urging that the Fordney bill be reduced to 1.40 cents a pound on Cuban raw.

intervene in the matter. An attempt to prevent the hanging today was made by the local branch of the Sons of Irish Freedom, whose officers said the taking of McHenry's life today would amount to a descration of the feast of Ireland's patron saint.

McHenry was found guilty of killing the automobile dealer while attempting to rob the dealer's place of business and of killing the detective in an endeavor to escape. It was brought out at the trial that he ha, served sentences in several New England reformatories and other penal institutions.

MORTUARY

Mrs. Mary Buffington. Mrs. Mary Buffington, aged 75, died at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon at the residence, 319 South Boulevard. The body will be taken to Macon at 7:50 o'clock Saturday morning. Washington, March 17.—John Mc-Henry, aged 24, former New London, Conn., youth, was hanged in the District of Columbia jail today for the murder of a Washington city detective and an automobile dealer.

Efforts to obtain a commutation to life imprisonment for the youth were continued up to the last, but failed, President Harding having refused to chapel of Awtry & Lowndes.

He closed his session by repeating that he would be on the job at the same hour Saturday night. "Who is Q S T?" I inquired with some interest.

"Who is Q S T?" I inquired with some interest.

"Everybody," he explained, blandly.
"Everybody equipped with a radio instrument within the sending radius of this machine. The radius is something better than 200 miles."

I took it all in slowly. That young fellow had simply talked into a thing-amajig that apparently had not been connected with anything anywhere, and still he asserted with confidence that the words he speke could be heard distinctly by eyerybody who possesses one of those little instruments within a 200-mile radius, which is a good deal of territory.

He didn't say it boastfully or vaingloriously. He said it with that simple assurance of an automobilist who declares his car can travel 30 miles an hour, or a gentleman who boasts he can eat three meals a day under ordinary conditions,
